BOLIA introduces two eye-catching modular sofas for AW25

On 4 August, BOLIA unveiled its new Autumn–Winter collection, centred on timeless design, comfort, and responsibility. With the introduction of the Avelou and Cosima Curved modular sofas, the Danish brand reaffirms its vision of organic forms, sensory design, and refined craftsmanship – created to elevate everyday living.

Avelou Sofa: tailored to perfection

Designed by the Italian studio Ferriani Sbolgi, known for its minimalist aesthetic and pursuit of balance, the Avelou sofa blends minimalist beauty with welcoming comfort. Created as a modular structure with simple, generous lines, it adapts to any interior through its combinable elements and changeable covers.

Its deep seating and embracing cushions create a cosy sanctuary for relaxation. A wooden or stone tray can be added to the matching pouf, adding both a graphic and practical element to the design.

FSC® certified, the Avelou sofa reflects BOLIA's commitment to responsible design. Sculptural and versatile, it emerges as a new essential in contemporary design.

Cosima Curved Sofa: organic comfort

A new interpretation of the iconic Cosima model, the Cosima Curved sofa stands out with its flowing, inviting curves. Designed by the German duo kaschkasch, it brings an organic, sensual touch to any space.

With low armrests and two seating depths – lounge or more compact – it offers a personalised experience, balancing enveloping comfort with a controlled structure. The feather filling further enhances this sense of well-being.

“We design simple, intuitive objects, without excess, but always poetic. A design is successful when it feels as though it has always existed,” explain Florian Kallus and Sebastian Schneider from the kaschkasch studio.

Modular and customisable, the Cosima Curved sofa naturally integrates with other modules from the collection for total freedom of composition.
